John B. “Jay” Handlan - Sports and Athletics

Jay Handlan left his mark in the sports world as one of the all-time most prolific basketball scorers in major college history.

The 1946 Triadelphia High School graduate became only the third major college player to score more than 2,000 career points. He capped his four-year, 94-game Washington & Lee career on March 1, 1952, by scoring 15 points against Southern Conference rival West Virginia in his final game to reach the 2,002 point mark. The 6-foot-2, 190-pound forward averaged 21.3 points a game for his career at the Lexington, Va., college.

Handlan's most productive year was as a junior when he averaged 26.2 points a game to nose out conference rival, All-American Mark Workman of West Virginia University, for second place nationally. He scored a school, and Southern Conference, record 66 points (49 in the first half) against Furman – then the third highest-ever mark by a major college player. In that game, he took 71 goal attempts (made 30), which remains the oldest NCAA Division 1 record. He also led the nation in free throw accuracy as a junior with an 86.0 per cent mark and set an NCAA record with a perfect 18-for-18 from the free throw line vs. Virginia.

Handlan's scoring marks for season and career average remain the records at Washington & Lee, while his total points are No. 2 in school history behind Dom Flora's 2,310. Handlan was ranked in the Top 16 in the nation in scoring all four seasons at W&L. He was twice featured for his scoring records in the nationally syndicated “Ripley's Believe It Or Not” newspaper feature.

Handlan earned Helms Foundation All-America second team honors as a junior and was three times an honorable mention All-American. He twice was All-Southern Conference and four times earned All-

Virginia college honors. He was team captain as a junior and senior and was inducted into the Washington & Lee Sports Hall of Fame in 1990.

As a college senior, he decided to become a multi-sport athlete and was a kicker-punter for the Generals. In the 1951 upset of unbeaten Virginia, he kicked all six extra points. He was offered a tryout as a kicker with the Cleveland Browns. He also lettered in track.

Handlan was drafted in 1952 by the Indianapolis Olympians of the National Basketball Association but opted to play in the National Industrial Basketball League for the Akron Goodyear Wingfoots. The NIBL attracted many college standouts since they provided full-time jobs in addition to the professional contracts for the athletes. Handlan played four years in the NIBL and earned league All-Star honors in 1954 when he led Akron in scoring with a 12.4 norm.

He was born February 2, 1928, in Wheeling, and the family resided in the Woodsdale and Highland Park areas. After attending Linsly Military Institute as a freshman, Handlan enrolled at Triadelphia for his final three years. He earned 12 varsity letters in four sports – three each in basketball, football and track; two in tennis; and one in swimming. In basketball, he earned All-City and All-OVAC honors and was honorable mention All-State. After high school, he served three years in the U.S. Army before enrolling at Washington & Lee.

After his athletic career ended, he eventually became president of one of the nation's largest technical service firms in Philadelphia while residing in Haddonfield, N.J. Handlan joined Day & Zimmerman in 1966 as an H.L. Yoh Co. division production manager. He remained with H.L. Yoh for 25 years and retired as the company president and board member of Day & Zimmerman in 1991. He passed away on January 10, 2013.

Frederick Faris – Business, Industry and Professions

Born in 1870 in St. Clairsville, Ohio, Frederick Faris was once called “the dean of Wheeling’s architects.” His father, J.A. Faris, was an artist, and he, too, was known for his portraits and landscapes including those of Ft. Henry and Oglebay Mansion.

Educated in Wheeling’s public schools, Faris had no formal training in architecture. His natural ability made him a master of the profession. He studied art in Chicago and New York, then returned to Wheeling where he became a draftsman with architect E.W. Wells. In 1902 he formed a partnership with noted Wheeling architects Edward Bates Franzheim and Millard Giesey, but spent the last 20 years of his career working alone.

After serving in the West Virginia Legislature from 1912 to 1914, Faris returned to Wheeling where he continued his public service by donating his talents for free to design public buildings, including Wheeling and Triadelphia high schools and Madison elementary school.

He was a 32nd degree mason and served the Scottish Rite Temple that he designed. He also was a Knight Templar and a member of the Elks Lodge No. 28 and the Osiris Temple of the Shrine.

Frederick Faris designed the longest (Market Auditorium) and the tallest (Schmulbach Building) buildings in the state at the time. Cranmer’s “History of Wheeling” said of him, “Mr. Faris is not only an artist in his work, but the construction and practical part is shown by some of the difficult work which he has constructed.”

Faris was listed in “Who’s Who in West Virginia in 1916” and “Progressive West Virginians” in both 1905 and 1923. An entire issue of “The Ohio Architect, Engineer, and Builder” was dedicated to his work in 1915.

His design work also included the Vineyard Hills Housing Project, the Laconia Building, Wheeling Country Club (now Stratford Springs), the Wagner Wholesale Grocery (now Main Street Bank), the YMCA (now Maxwell Center), the former Ohio County Public Library, the Children’s Home (no longer standing), the Wheeling Electric Company, the First National Bank of West Virginia, and the Wheeling Intelligencer building. Residences designed by him include the Howard Mansion and Apartments, the Cathedral residence, Mt. Carmel Monastery, and the homes of Otto Schenk and Charles Hancher. He also designed the Formosa Apartments, the entrance to the Schmulbach estate, the McLain Apartments, and the summer home of William Pfarr, whose estate is located along Millionaires Row near Oglebay Park.

Faris designed the North Wheeling Hospital (no longer standing), the Wheeling Water Pumping Station, the Central Union Building, the Brown Brothers Building, the Ohio County Airport terminal, and the Exposition Hall at the Wheeling Fairgrounds. His work also included Shotwell Hall at West Liberty University.

Frederick Faris died of complications of strep throat in 1927. After months of enduring the illness, but continuing his work, Faris was admitted to Ohio Valley General Hospital. When stricken with his illness, he had just completed plans for the Home for the Aged in Warwood. He was survived by his wife, Nellie Edgerter. They had no children.

The newspaper said of him, “Mr. Faris was a very public-spirited citizen and did much to further the advancement, both material and idealistic, of the city. The many beautiful buildings for which he drew the plans stand as a memorial to Mr. Faris who succeeded in each endeavor to add to the architectural beauty of the city.”

Dr. Arthur Rybeck - Philanthropy

Dr. S. Arthur “Art” Rybeck Jr. was born August 2, 1923, on Wheeling Island, the son of Samuel and Rosalind Rybeck. During his youth, Art and his family moved to a farm on Cherry Hill Road, where he developed his love for the outdoors, and spent his summers camping on Colonel Oglebay’s Waddington Farm, which would eventually become Oglebay Park. When Oglebay Institute was established, Art and his younger brother Walter enrolled as the Institute’s first youth members and became devoted students of Oglebay’s first naturalist, A.B. Brooks.

Following his graduation from Triadelphia High School in 1941, Art attended West Virginia University until 1943 and then served in the Army Signal Corps during World War II. During his military service, Art studied electronics at Philadelphia’s Drexel Institute followed by service in France, the Philippines, and finally the military occupation of Japan.

After his military service, in 1945 Corporal Rybeck returned to the United States and entered the University of Pennsylvania School of Dental Medicine on the GI Bill. After earning his Doctor of Dental Surgery (DDS) degree in 1950, Dr. Rybeck opened his first dental practice in the Laconia Building in downtown Wheeling and in 1981 entered into a practice with Dr. Donald Lough and co-founded Gentle Dental Care on Washington Avenue.

Throughout his career, Dr. Rybeck passionately studied, improved, and shared new approaches to community health and nutrition, especially as related to good dental health. In the early 1970s he co-invented dental equipment that he patented and distributed to dentists internationally. In the early 1980s, he was invited to China where he introduced flossing and preventative care at Chinese dental schools.

Given his philanthropic nature to give back to the community for which he cared so much, Dr. Rybeck founded the Viewpoint Dental Clinic at the lodge on his New Dawn Farm in Triadelphia. From its start in 1998 until his passing in 2008, on most Saturdays Dr. Rybeck, with the help of volunteer dental assistants, provided free dental services to anyone in need who arrived at the clinic.

The Viewpoint Dental Clinic was a complete dental facility with an open floor plan, looking out over the rolling hills of the Ohio Valley through a wall of glass. As horses brushed up against the clinic windows, Dr. Rybeck treated two patients at a time, pivoting between dental chairs that faced one another. If one patient needed to learn about flossing or some other good dental hygiene practice, Dr. Rybeck would invite other patients and anyone waiting to gather around for the lesson. That unconventional clinic scene became the subject of an award-winning 2002 documentary titled “Dental Farmer.”

Together with his wife of 57 years, Sivia Brody Rybeck, they raised five children in their home on Birch Avenue; Charles, Dan, Blanche, Abe, and Ted. Art was a lifetime congregant of Temple Shalom, an active supporter for all Oglebay Institute programs, the founder of a non-profit to reform West Virginia’s tax structure to make it more equitable, a 33rd degree Scottish Rite Mason, and a member of the Chamber of Commerce and its Leadership Wheeling program, the WV Silver-haired Legislature, the Ohio Valley Peace Group, the Brooks Bird Club, and numerous health care and professional dental associations.

Active to the end, Dr. Rybeck was treating patients at the Viewpoint Dental Clinic until the day before he passed away on January 18, 2008.

Billy Cox - Music and Fine Arts

Billy Cox is synonymous with almost any reference to Jimi Hendrix and rock 'n' roll history. They truly can be described as legendary.

From their Army days together, Billy would have an extended friendship with Hendrix. The kindred spirits had a musical chemistry that was nurtured throughout the years, as both performed regularly as sidemen for the most prominent blues and R&B acts of the day. The bond between the two men would write a new chapter in music history, highlighted by their appearance at the music festival called The Woodstock Music & Art Fair or, simply, Woodstock.

During the August 1969 event, held on a dairy farm in New York, 32 acts performed outdoors before an audience of 400,000 young people. It is widely regarded as a pivotal moment in popular music history. Rolling Stone magazine listed it as one of the "50 Moments That Changed the History of Rock and Roll." And this Wheeling native was on that stage. In fact, he and Hendrix closed out the festival.

Billy Cox's father was a Baptist minister and teacher of mathematics, and his mother was a classical pianist. He was born in Wheeling on October 18, 1941. His official biography says he was blessed with the best of both worlds. One world revolved around the strong intellectual discipline of his father, and the other world revolved around the loving tenderness and sensitivity of his mother. He attended Wheeling's Lincoln School and says he has many good memories of his hometown.

Growing up in Wheeling, Cox enjoyed musical influences that included classical, gospel, and country via the WWVA Jamboree. During his early teen years, Billy's family moved to Pittsburgh. After high school, he enlisted in the U.S. Army's 101st Airborne Division. It was there that Billy met and became friends with Jimi Hendrix. After both were discharged, Billy and Jimi played at local night spots in cities and towns in the South and Midwest. The two finally settled in Nashville and formed The King Kasuals Band.

Between 1962-68, Billy's bass playing was in high demand, and he played behind some of the greatest musicians of the time, including Sam Cooke, Charlie Daniels, Rufus Thomas, Lou Rawls, Etta James, Jackie Wilson, and Little Richard, in house bands, touring bands, or during recording sessions. During this period, Billy also played bass on half of all the black gospel music recorded in Nashville. He also played in sessions with country or folk musicians.

Cox played bass on the pioneering R&B television shows, Nashville's "Night Train" and then "The!!!! Beat" from Dallas. In 1969, Hendrix called his old friend Cox, who joined him in New York as his studio bassist. Their first job was at Woodstock. After the break-up of the Jimi Hendrix Experience, Cox became a member of Hendrix's experimental group, tentatively titled Gypsy Sun and Rainbows. Hendrix then formed another group with Cox and Buddy Miles, the Band of Gypsys. The Band of Gypsys was a power trio that fused blues and hard rock. Rolling Stone magazine in its 20th anniversary issue in 1987 cited the Band of Gypsys concert as one of the 10 greatest concerts of all time.

As of November 12, 2008, Cox was the only surviving member of both The Jimi Hendrix Experience and the Band of Gypsys. He currently plays with the Experience Hendrix, a touring Hendrix tribute band featuring top guitarists and former Hendrix collaborators. Billy's solo album, "Last Gypsy Standing," was released in 2009. He was inducted into the Musicians Hall of Fame in Nashville the same year.

Today, Billy Cox owns a video production company in Nashville. He has produced numerous blues and a myriad of gospel shows. He co-authored the books "Jimi Hendrix Sessions" and "Ultimate Hendrix." In 2011, Billy was inducted into the West Virginia Music Hall of Fame. That same year, Billy released his latest album, "Old School Blue Blues."

Allan Connolly - Education and Religion

Allan Connolly's career in education began with Ohio County Schools in 1965, teaching English and Social Studies at Clay Junior High School. He went on to become the department chairperson for both of those content subjects. He served as the assistant basketball coach and later as the head coach for 10 years while at Clay School, earning three freshman championships during that stint. In 1976, the first year of Wheeling Park High School, he moved to the new high school to teach Social Studies and assist with the basketball program, a year when the Wheeling Park High School team won the WV State Title. The following year, he was appointed assistant principal, where he would serve for the next 22 years. Allan formally ended his career with Ohio County Schools in 1999, completing 34 years of teaching, encouraging, and guiding students in the city. Even after his retirement, he continues to contribute to Ohio County Schools, serving as a substitute administrator from time to time.

Allan graduated from Bluefield State College in 1965 with a bachelor's degree in secondary education and received his master's degree in education administration from West Virginia University in 1969, later updating to a masters plus 30 additional hours. He has been involved in textbook committees, the Social Studies Curriculum Improvement Committee, and the pilot team teaching interdisciplinary projects.

A self-made man, Allan put himself through college working as a clerk and meat cutter at a small supermarket in Bluefield, W.Va. He served as a cadet teacher at Genoa Junior High School prior to graduation, teaching ninth grade Civics. In addition, he was heavily involved in social science clubs, the NEA student group, and the Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity, all while working to pay for and studying to obtain his undergraduate degree.

A career-long supporter of Wheeling Park High School, Allan was inducted into the Wheeling Park High School Athletic Hall of Fame with the Distinguished Patriot Award. One principal evaluator commented, "The only person who attends more athletic events to support our students is the athletic director himself." He supports all student athletes of both genders at home and away.

Allan was honored at the 1998-99 graduation ceremony as a Wheeling Park High School Scholar. His interest and concern for all students throughout his career is unsurpassed.

His recognition does not end with his affiliation with the Ohio County School system. Allan was inducted into the West Virginia All-Black Schools Sports Association Hall of Fame for Lifetime Achievement in 2011 for his 30 years of outstanding service as a professional educator.

Allan is on the Board of Trustees at Simpson Methodist Church and has served as the head of the Education Committee, which awards scholarships for deserving high school students. He serves on the NAACP Education Committee for Ohio County, determining student scholarships and providing input with advanced placement and honors programs, the afterschool program, and technology programs. In 2013 he received the Martin Luther King, Jr., award from the Upper Ohio Valley Clergy.

He also is a member of the Ohio County Retired Personnel Association. However, belonging to the organization is not enough; he is responsible for transporting members who would have no other way of attending were it not for his generosity.

Allan is the father of two adult children, Yvette and William, thus his life has been spent as an educator, coach, administrator, parent, friend, and citizen who is very deserving of being named to the Wheeling Hall of Fame.

Mary Elizabeth Fassig (Keyser) - Music and Fine Arts

Mary Elizabeth Fassig (Keyser) was a dance icon in Wheeling for much of the 20th century. But her fame began on the national stage when vaudeville was king.

Born March 11, 1905, to Wheeling residents Percival and Mary Ellen Altmeyer Fassig, she attended Ohio County public schools. Her mother and father died in 1934 and 1941, respectively. Her mother was the daughter of Luke and Mary Hartung Altmeyer. Her father was born in Columbus, Ohio, worked at Wheeling's Hazel Atlas Glass Co., and played the cello in the Wheeling Symphony.

Fassig loved dancing from an early age and trained under instructor Alma Schafer in Wheeling before begging her parents to let her go to New York City — while she was still in high school. She studied in New York with a Russian teacher before she got her big break and was cast in a vaudeville act.

She then was a professional dancer and entertainer, active on the vaudeville circuit in the 1920s. During this time, she performed in New York and all along the East Coast; she also danced professionally on cruise ships to the Caribbean and Cuba. She continued to train in New York during her professional years and enjoyed success until an illness brought her home to Wheeling, where she turned to teaching.

After her marriage to musician T. Kenneth Keyser, the couple lived at 31 Oak Park, near what was then known as Triadelphia High School. Ken played the piano for Miss Fassig in her dance studio for many years. She spent a number of years teaching dance at West Liberty State College and working with the theatre department, then under the direction of New York stage professional Stanley Harrison.

Her main studio was located in Wheeling's old Pythian Lodge building, until it was torn down to make way for the West Virginia Northern Community College plaza. She then relocated to the Central Union Building until her retirement just a few years before she died in 1986. She also maintained studios in Tyler, Wetzel and Belmont counties.

She had two children, a daughter Karen Sue (deceased) and a son Kurt, who resides in Virginia Beach, Va.,

after a 30-year career in the United States Navy.

Her students performed throughout the Ohio Valley, on television, in minstrels, at schools, hospitals, nursing homes, and more. Considered a demanding teacher, she was known for her discipline and insistence on perfection. But she loved her students and wanted to see them succeed. Many of them went on to professional success, including six who became NYC Rockettes. Some of these include: Willadean Skillcorn Harris (deceased) and Rosalie Hornyak of New Jersey.

This devoted artist taught and mentored performers for more than 60 years. Even Lou "The Toe" Groza, a famous kicker in the National Football League (NFL) Hall of Fame, who grew up in Martins Ferry, Ohio, learned skills from Fassig.

Fassig School of The Dance became known as the "school with a professional touch," according to her former student of 30 years, Janet Ciripompa Grubler of Wheeling. Gruber also recalls that in 1964, the Fassig School was invited to perform at the United States Pavilion of the World's Fair in New York City, on West Virginia Day.

Throughout the years, many of her students went on to perform professionally, including 2013 West Virginia Music Hall of Fame honoree Peter Marshall, the well-known game show host, who recalls taking tap dancing lessons from Fassig, then making his stage debut in 1934, at age nine, dancing and singing at the Capitol Theatre. Another student was Marshall's sister, actress Joanne Dru.

She trained thousands of young men and women not only in dance technique, but also in stage presence and poise. Considered the ultimate professional, Miss Fassig is truly Wheeling's "grand dame of dance."

Susan Cox Hogan - Public Service

Susan Cox Hogan's public service has been intertwined with her professional career and her active volunteer life, which continues to this day. In particular she has championed social justice, economic development, community revitalization, and the arts at local, state, national, and international levels.

Susan and her husband, William N. Hogan, Jr., volunteered with the Peace Corps in Benin, West Africa from 1987 to 1991. Upon their return, Susan became executive director of the YWCA of Wheeling, a position she held for seven years. During her tenure, the Wheeling YWCA was awarded the Racial Justice Award by the national YWCA in recognition of the programs that Susan designed as Executive Director. In 1997 Susan attended the Fourth Annual Conference on Women in Beijing, China, and in that same year she was selected by the Claude Worthington Benedum Foundation as a Benedum Fellow to mentor the YWCAs in Clarksburg and Huntington during a two-year period. That same year Susan also served as a delegate to the historic Presidents' Summit in Philadelphia, convened by President Bill Clinton and former Presidents Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan, Gerald R. Ford, and George H. W. Bush. Subsequently Susan was active with West Virginia's Promise delegation and Ohio County's Promise.

Reprising their previous international service in 1999, Susan and Bill spent four months volunteering in the mountains of Slovakia for ACIDI/VOCA, an economic development organization that fosters broad-based economic growth, raises living standards, and creates vibrant communities. They worked in the villages of Horna and Dolna Marikova near the Czech border.

Long an advocate for civil rights and social justice, Susan was recognized in 2000 for her efforts with the Living the Dream Award by the West Virginia Martin Luther King Jr. Holiday Commission. And for nine years Susan served on the Governor's Commission for National and Community Service by appointment of West Virginia Governors Gaston Caperton and Cecil Underwood.

Susan presently serves on the board of West Virginia Public Broadcasting, of which she has been a member for 26 years. Appointed by Gov. Joe Manchin, she continues to serve as a Commissioner for the Arts of West Virginia's Department of Culture and History. She also has served on the board of Wheeling's Youth Services System for more than 25 years. An active member of the Rotary Club of Wheeling, Susan recently led the effort to restore the Madison Square Garden at Madison Elementary School in memory of D. Milton Gutman and continues with Rotary's Read Aloud program for the children of Madison School.

Susan is active on the Mayor's Arts and Cultural Commission, overseeing multiple arts projects including murals in downtown Wheeling and the creation of the Pocket Park, Wheeling's first art installation on Main Street. She serves as chair of the Design Committee of Reinvent Wheeling and leads efforts to install art and develop green space. In 2012 she was honored with the first Community Spirit Award by Mayor Andy McKenzie for her efforts to revitalize downtown Wheeling. Susan also has served on the board of directors of the West Liberty University Foundation. She is a charter member of the board of directors of Grow Ohio Valley, sharing its mission to strengthen Ohio Valley communities, families, and residents through growing organic food, sustainable living, and economic development. Also, she is a member of the board of the West Virginia Music Hall of Fame. Susan is the former executive director of the Wheeling Symphony Society Inc., where she served for 17 years.

James Nelson Vance - Business Industry and Professions

Lifelong Wheeling resident James Nelson Vance came to be known as one of Wheeling's "Captains of Industry." Born in 1829 to James and Mary Waddle Vance on his family's farm near the intersection of National Road and Bethany Pike, Vance attended public schools and then entered a long and productive business career.

In 1853, at age 24, Vance started in the retail iron and hardware business on Monroe Street (now 12th Street.) Seven years later he joined O.C. Dewey and W.H. Russell to form a new firm of Dewey, Vance, and Co. During the Civil War, the firm manufactured much-needed railroad spikes and iron, which led to several expansions of the Wheeling Iron and Spike Works, making it, at that time, the largest factory of its kind in the world. In this same time period, Vance served as Captain of Company D, Fourth Regiment, Wheeling Militia.

After the war ended, the company began construction of a nail mill on the corner of Main and 24th streets, naming it the Riverside Mill. Vance served as president of the company for a quarter century. When the mill went into operation in 1867, there were 48 machines and 22 furnaces. Within three years, another 42 machines were added; a second factory later added another 134 machines. The company's capacity at that point was an amazing 10,000 kegs of nails per week.

A plant was added in Benwood in 1872, and in 1875 the company's official name became the Riverside Iron Works Co., with J. N. Vance serving as president. On June 11, 1884, the state's first Bessemer converter began operation at the Wheeling plant, marking the birth of the steel industry in West Virginia and changing the local focus from iron products to steel. Another plant was added in Steubenville two years later. Total Riverside payroll at the time amounted to $50,000 per month (the equivalent of more than $1.25 million today), with some 6,000 employees. A September 1886 Wheeling

Daily Intelligencer article called the Riverside Iron Works "the leading manufactory of Wheeling and vicinity" with "two well-equipped blast furnaces of large capacity, a steel plant extensive enough to convert into steel the entire product of these furnaces, the largest nail factory in existence in the world, a complete bar iron mill, and the finest nail plant works in the country." The newspaper article adds that until shortly before 1886, "Wheeling and vicinity made considerably more than half the soft steel turned out in the country, and its production now (1886), including the Bellaire and Laughlin and Junction steel plants, fully half of that of the United States."

The tube works at Riverside manufactured steel steam, gas, and water pipes, with products reportedly sold to every civilized country in the world. The enlarged works became one of the most extensive and best equipped in the country, employing some 200 men. That portion of the works was sold to National Tube Co. in 1899 and was absorbed into United States Steel in 1901. Vance resigned as a director of the company at that time.

In addition to iron and steel interests, Vance was a founder or officer of several financial institutions and was involved in other business interests ranging from shoes to glass to insurance.

James Nelson Vance also was known for his philanthropy, in particular through major funding for construction of Wheeling's YMCA building and his support for the YWCA and Ohio Valley General Hospital. His name lives on as the benefactor of Vance Memorial Church, built in memory of his parents. He married Lillie Edgerton McClellan in 1863; the couple had four children who survived to adulthood – sons Henry Edgerton, James Nelson, and William, and daughter Lillie.

Clyde D. Campbell - Public Service

Scientist, educator, wellness advocate, and community booster, Clyde D. Campbell attended Ritchie and Webster schools before he graduated from Warwood High School in 1948. He earned undergraduate degrees (BS and AB) in chemistry from West Liberty State College, where his classmates honored him with the distinction of Mr. Hilltopper, the student body's most prestigious award. He received advanced degrees from North Carolina State (MS) and West Virginia University (PhD) in biological and organic chemistry. In the early 1960s he worked at Mobay Chemical as Senior Research Chemist, and, in 1967, he returned to West Liberty as chair of the School of Natural Sciences.

Subsequently, he held the posts of dean of administration and academics, and from 1984 to 1995, he served as West Liberty's president. In the 1999-2000 academic year, he was interim president of Jefferson Community College and created its development office.

Dr. Campbell is a member of various scientific societies, including the American Chemical Society and the West Virginia Academy of Science, and chaired the advisory board of the Northern Regional Consortium for Science, Mathematics, and Technology. He holds 31 national and foreign patents, most involving research in plastics, plant pigments, and ruminant metabolism. He continues to work on synthetic livestock feeds as one solution to ending world hunger.

His commitment to education manifested itself in his service on the Ohio County Board of Education in the late 1960s, when he also served as its president. During his tenure on that board, Ohio County took its first steps to modernization of its physical facilities and the consolidation of its high schools, reforms that were realized in the mid 1970s.

During the late 1970s, he became an advocate and spokesperson for wellness, especially heart health.

For a decade he chaired the Ohio County Heart Association, during which time the organization was recognized by the national association for its outstanding service to the community. As college president, he spearheaded the move to establish and to accredit a baccalaureate degree in nursing and, under his leadership, the school's programs in medical technology and dental hygiene were enhanced and updated. All of these programs now are housed in Campbell Hall, the newest building on the West Liberty University campus.

A scientist of the first rank, Dr. Campbell also is a man of deep religious faith: for 56 years he taught the adult Sunday school class at Warwood's United Methodist Church, and, on more than 100 occasions, he served as a guest pastor in area Presbyterian and Methodist churches.

He remains true to his Wheeling roots: past member of the board of directors of the Oglebay Institute, a member of Rotary, member of the Habitat for Humanity board, emeritus member of the Blue Pencil Club, past president of the West Liberty Alumni Association, founder of the Warwood High School Alumni Association, and co-chair of the Garden Park Improvement Association of Warwood.

Part of Dr. Campbell's service to his community, known and admired by his closest friends and colleagues, is not so well known publicly: he has served as mentor, advisor, and confidant for many young people, and those folks now are orthodontists, doctors, teachers, patent-holding scientists, and civic and political leaders.

Dr. Campbell is married to the former Joan Luhan, a West Liberty alumna and former fourth grade teacher at Warwood Elementary. The couple has one adult daughter, Leslie Ann, and three grandchildren. Love for family and his faith are the only things he holds more valuable than his devotion to public service.
