Rosemary Front - Public Service

Because of the advocacy of Rosemary Front, the Wheeling area was at the forefront of the movement towards total accessibility for people with disabilities. Her life's work resulted in a legacy that continues to benefit children with special needs.

She was born in Wheeling in 1940, attended Wheeling Country Day School, and graduated from Triadelphia High School. She received a Bachelor of Science degree from Southern Illinois University, her Master's Degree from Wayne State University, and an Honorary Doctor of Humanities Degree from Wheeling Jesuit University.

As a speech pathologist, Front was employed at the Wheeling Society for Crippled Children from 1966-1968. She was the first professional CEO at the Society for Crippled Children, which became the Easter Seal Rehabilitation Center, holding that position from 1969-98. She was an executive director of the West Virginia Easter Seal Society for three years.

During the years she served the Easter Seals as executive director, Front worked to develop local disability programs into state-of-the-art comprehensive rehabilitative services throughout West Virginia and Eastern Ohio. She served on state, regional, and national boards, including President Reagan's Architectural and Transportation Barriers Comprehensive Board where she helped to ensure that men and women with disabilities gained the right to open access to places and resources.

Front built a small non-profit charity, Wheeling Society for Crippled Children, consisting of four staff members, into a professional rehabilitation business with more than 55 staff members, implementing programs and services for children with special needs, assuring that indigent care funding was created, and overseeing construction of the rehabilitation facility, housing the Easter Seal Rehabilitation Center, in 1975.

When it came to dedication to Easter Seals, Front possessed the willingness to challenge those who she believed did not know what was best for the local program. When National Easter Seals attempted to claim a large portion of what the local program raised for the benefit of the National Easter Seals, Front resisted that attempt, believing that the funds raised for the Wheeling entity should remain in Wheeling. As a result, the corporation known as the Society for Crippled Children became the financial arm of the operation with Easter Seals being the operating treatment entity. Therefore, money raised locally was used locally. The Society for Crippled Children's financial arm continues to receive, through the telecast fundraiser, more than $240,000 annually to be used for operation of the combined facility. Her vision was for the children and families served to have a combined daycare and treatment facility, saving the patients and their relatives the inconvenience and hardship of using two separate facilities.

Front was aggressive in bringing attention to accessibility violations in the area, and she was tenacious when it came to correction of violations. After receiving the Ability Through Mobility Award for furthering the cause of helping those with physical disabilities she said she was fortunate to have lived in the United States when she contracted polio because of the accessibility and service available to people with disabilities.

Front was a principled individual, a successful clinical therapist, and an ethical, excellent CEO. Along with all of these virtues she also possessed a keen and cultured mind that attracted volunteers, admirers, and friends from every walk of life.

Upon her death in 2009, she was memorialized as someone who "sat taller in her wheelchair than many of us ever stood on two feet."

Marc Harshman - Music and Fine Arts

Poet, children's book author, and storyteller Marc Harshman was named West Virginia's seventh Poet Laureate on May 18, 2012, and the Wheeling resident became the first to hold that title from the northern part of the state since the position was created in 1927.

"I'm pleased Marc has accepted this unique opportunity to serve as poet laureate," Gov. Earl Ray Tomblin said in a statement. "Whether it's one of his children's stories or a prose poem, Marc's creativity serves as a reminder of the immeasurable talent of West Virginia's authors. I hope, in this new capacity, he will continue to challenge himself and inspire a new generation of writers."

Harshman, a former resident of Moundsville who relocated to Wheeling in 2001, was born in Randolph County, Ind., and has spent most of his adult life in the Wheeling area with his wife, children's author Cheryl Ryan, and daughter, Sarah. He earned his bachelor's degree at Bethany College, a master's degree in religion at Yale University Divinity School and a master's degree in English at the University of Pittsburgh.

Harshman says the culture of West Virginia and his fellow writers throughout the state continue to influence his work. "It's truly surprising how many great authors we have for such a small state. We have a very vibrant, healthy community of writers of all genres here in West Virginia, so it's a true honor for me," he said. "I grew up as a farm boy, and I've always found myself very welcomed here. There's a sense of community here regardless if you live in a rural or urban area, and that sense of community is very important to my work."

The author's books help teach children life's lessons, covering a variety of subjects from the difficulties that come with moving to a new neighborhood to living with a loved one who struggles with addiction. One book, Only

One, which promotes a message of peace and unity, was featured as a Reading Rainbow review title on PBS TV.

Harshman's poetry, though, is separate from his children's work. Harshman has published poems in dozens of journals and anthologies. In addition to receiving a poetry fellowship (2000) and a fellowship in children's literature (2008) from West Virginia Commission on the Arts, as well as a fellowship from the University of Minnesota (1994), which he used to research Scandinavian myth and folklore, Harshman has been nominated for a Pushcart Prize and has won a Literal Latte Journal award for his prose poems. Other honors include a 1995 Smithsonian Notable Book for Children prize (for The Storm) and a Parent's Choice Award. He was 1995 West Virginia English Teacher of the Year. His prose poem "In the Company of Heaven" won a Newport Review flash fiction contest.

Beyond three chapbooks of poetry, recently published is a full-length collection, "Green-Silver and Silent," spanning 30 years of work. He's been an educator in area public schools, a frequent lecturer and workshop leader, and holds an honorary Doctor of Letters from Bethany College recognizing his life's work as a poet and children's author.

A critic has written this about Marc Harshman: Place — his childhood in Indiana, his long residency in West Virginia, and his travels abroad — exerts a strong influence in Harshman's work and roots it.

His three decades in West Virginia, Harshman says, are "a singular blessing" to his writer's life.

G. Ogden Nutting - Business, Industry and Professions

G. Ogden Nutting was born in 1935, and it could be said that he arrived with newspaper publishing in his blood. The history of newspaper publishing in Wheeling far precedes the role taken by Nutting. In fact, the current business, The Ogden Newspapers, dates back to 1890 when Nutting's grandfather, H.C. Ogden, another member of the Wheeling Hall of Fame, started the Wheeling Daily News. Described as a "spirited editor and publisher who cared deeply about his community," H.C. Ogden imparted his high ideals and entrusted the future of his newspapers to his descendants.

In 1968 Nutting became the third generation of his family to direct and manage the company when he became general manager after twelve years working in all departments at several newspapers. He was named president and publisher in 1970. Under Nutting's leadership, the company has continued to expand to take advantage of opportunities in new markets and now publishes in twelve states. He has skillfully guided a Wheeling business founded in the 19th century into the challenging corporate climate of the 21st century. The Ogden Newspapers is West Virginia's largest newspaper company and one of the ten largest in the country in number of daily newspapers.

Besides being an astute and able publisher, Nutting is also a strong contributor to the community. He has been a member of the Board of Directors of the West Virginia University Foundation, is on the Board of Trustees of both Bethany College and the Linsly School, and is a former member of the Visiting Committee of the WVU School of Journalism. He and his family have demonstrated a commitment to education in West Virginia through scholarships, endowments, and other support to Bethany College and WVU.

Over the course of his long and productive career, his publishing peers and the institutions he has served have recognized Nutting. In 2012 he received the Frank W. Mayborn Leadership Award from the Southern Newspaper

Publishers Association in recognition of his vision, community leadership, and significant contributions to the newspaper industry. Comments when that award was presented included, "He is deeply committed to the cities and towns his newspapers serve." "He celebrates the successes of those communities and heralds stories of people at their best. He shares their losses and is committed to reporting their failings – particularly when those failings are the fault of elected leaders. Above all, he underscores the importance of what we leave behind to the next generation." He is a "leading light in our industry, a visionary and the epitome of a community newspaperman."

Other awards and honors Nutting has received include an Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters Degree from Bethany College, an Honorary Doctorate from West Virginia University; membership in the WVU Business Hall of Fame and the Order of Vandalia; the Paul A. Atkins Friend of the School Award from the WVU Journalism Alumni Association; WVU's Most Loyal West Virginian Award for his service to WVU and the state; WVU Foundation's Outstanding Philanthropy Award; and the University's Distinguished Service Award for exceptional leadership.

Active in national and state newspaper and journalism associations, Mr. Nutting has served on boards or committees of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association; the American Newspaper Publishers Association; and the West Virginia Press Association, which in 1994 named him a life member "in appreciation for years of outstanding service" and gave him the Adam R. Kelly Premier Journalist Award.

Augustus Pollack - Business, Industry and Professions

“Work wins” Augustus Pollack once wrote, a simple, two-word motto that came to define the Wheeling businessman’s life and career.

Augustus Pollack was born in Germany on July 5, 1830 to a reasonably well-to-do farming family. Augustus was educated at Buende College and apprenticed at a large commercial house until political upheaval and the prospect of military conscription prompted the 18-year-old to immigrate to the United States.

He first settled in Baltimore, establishing a notions and fancy goods business, which he moved to Wheeling in 1854. Pollack married Rosalie Weinberg of Baltimore in 1855 (they had one son and six daughters) and established another business in Grafton in 1858. Pollack moved to Wheeling permanently in 1860 and lived with his family above his Main Street business. He resided in Wheeling for the next 46 years until his death on April 23, 1906.

Pollack served on the board of education and as an elector on Republican Benjamin Harrison’s presidential ticket. A devoted Unionist during the Civil War, Pollack allowed the U.S. military to use his Grafton buildings without charge for the war effort, prompting a letter of gratitude from Secretary of War Simon Cameron. Pollack helped establish a German American volunteer company, and helped bring the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati & St. Louis Railroad into Wheeling.

A German Jew, Pollack was an active member of Wheeling’s German immigrant community, helping to establish a German language newspaper, “The Patriot,” and serving for a time as president of both the German Bank and German Fire Insurance Companies. Pollack was named honorary president of the 1885 Saengerfest, a large German singing festival and, in 1870, helped raise money for the widows and orphans of German soldiers killed in war. Pollack also served as Director of the Linsly Institute as well as trustee of the Female College and was a generous patron of the arts, particularly classical music.

Pollack founded his signature business, Crown Stogies, on Water Street in East Wheeling in 1871. In just 15 years, Crown Stogies grew to become West Virginia’s largest cigar manufacturer. At their peak, his two factories employed more than 500 people. When built, his factory spanning 18th and 19th Streets from Chapline to Eoff was one of the largest cigar factories in the world. In his 1906 obituary, the Wheeling News-Register declared that no one deserved “more credit for the Wheeling stogie’s prestige.”

Known to work 16-hour days at his office on Water Street, Pollack did not ask more of his employees than he did of himself. He paid them well and maintained an open door policy regarding employee concerns over work conditions, hours, wages – an unusually progressive attitude for a nineteenth century entrepreneur. Thus, while his contemporaries in steel and coal faced regular and often violent labor struggles, Pollack’s employees remained comparatively loyal and content. His policies influenced other local stogie manufacturers, rendering stogie-making Wheeling’s most desirable career choice for the working class.

Pollack’s employees and their local union brethren publicly demonstrated their affection for him in an unprecedented manner. After he died on April 23, 1906, local labor unions, led by the Garfield Assembly of International Stogie Makers, collected donations from their membership to erect a large monument in Pollack’s honor. Depicting a handshake between employee and the employer, the monument was placed in a prominent position on the grounds of Wheeling’s city building. It was later moved to its current home on Main Street near the Fort Henry Bridge on-ramp.

The inscription reads: “ERECTED BY TRADE UNION MEMBERS OF UNITED STATES IN MEMORY OF AUGUSTUS POLLACK WHOSE BUSINESS LIFE AND ACTIONS ALWAYS IN SYMPATHY WITH ORGANIZED LABOR.” The Pollack monument is thought to be the only memorial ever built by labor in honor of a business owner.

Stanley E. Romanoski - Sports and Athletics

Stan Romanoski could justifiably be labeled “Mr. Track and Cross Country” in West Virginia for his 40-year college and high school coaching career capped by 24 years at West Virginia University.

He was an ambassador and state pioneer for the sport and promoted running and track and field year-round. He traveled the state in the summers to assist local coaches with competitions, clinics, AAU meets, etc. At WVU, he founded the Mountaineer Relays and the WVU Invitational cross country meet for high school runners. He originated the state prep cross country meet, which was later sanctioned and run by the West Virginia Secondary Schools Activities Commission as the state championship event. He started the indoor track program at WVU without a facility and led the effort for new indoor and outdoor track facilities in the 1970's. Also, he was the featured speaker to kick-off the Elby's Distance Race in Wheeling.

Coaching men's track and cross country teams from 1957-81, he piloted more All-America trackmen (7) than any other Mountaineer coach. Included were distance runners Carl Hatfield, Roger Meador, Mike Mosser, Don Sauer, and Alex Kasich, hurdler Garnet Edwards, and pole vaulters Jack Carter plus his first team captain Dave Tork, currently a Wheeling resident, who later set a world record as the world's second 16-foot vaulter. Mosser, an NCAA indoor champion, participated in the “Dream Mile” with Olympians Jim Ryun and Marty Liquori. Edwards won the 1979 Penn Relays' high hurdles and was an NCAA outdoor high hurdle finalist two years and indoor finalist in 1979 when he was “outleaned” for first place by Olympian Renaldo Nehemiah. He also coached WVU's first African-American varsity athlete--long jumper Philip Edwards from Morgantown.

At WVU, Romanoski's track teams were 70-39-1 and cross country team records were 128-64. He coached three Southern Conference cross country title teams which advanced to the NCAA Tournament. The 1962 squad finished 20th in the country, the highest placing for a WVU team. He also served as vice-president and later president of the IC4A track coaches' association and conducted college and high school coaching clinics around the region.

His passion for the sport started at Triadelphia High School. Competing for coach Charley Petty, he won the state one-class 880-yard titles as a junior and senior (1936) with times of 2:03.2 and 2:04, compared to the state record of 2:02. He also set a West Virginia regional mile record time of 4:40 which lasted a decade. And he played end in football.

He enrolled at Belmont Abbey College in North Carolina and played three sports for two years before enrolling at WVU for his final two years. At WVU, he ran track under his coaching predecessor, Art Smith, and was a member of the 1941 mile relay team which set a school record that lasted over 30 years.

After college, he rebuilt two state high school athletic programs sandwiched around a Navy tour of duty. He started his coaching career at Ansted High School, which was coming off a 30-game losing streak in football and a 3-60 basketball record. His three football teams went 24-5 including 9-0-1 in 1947, and a basketball team was 19-2. After the Navy tour, he took over a Dunbar program that was 1-9 in football and 1-19 in basketball the previous year. In nine seasons, his football teams were 52-33-1 and his 1957 track team won a one-class state championship. That feat earned him the state all-sport Coach of the Year award, the only time in 70 years of the honor that a coach was cited primarily for track. He had started track at both schools and also coached basketball. He also coached the South to a victory in the 1953 West Virginia North-South Football game. Overall, he coached 11 winning prep football teams. Then it was off to WVU.

Romanoski was born August 2, 1918 in Homestead, Pa. His family moved to Wheeling in 1923 and resided in the Overbrook area. He attended St. Vincent's Grade School before enrolling at Triadelphia High School. He passed away on June 26, 2004.

He has been inducted into the West Virginia University Sports Hall of Fame and the West Virginia state Sports Hall of Fame.
